3	We moved here specifically for this and I almost had to do early enrollment into kindergarten because my son wasn't going to get in CVP as they were all booked up. We both work at home, but this doesn't mean we can also child-sit. We NEED affordable childcare including choices. For us we gravitate towards Montessori type, play based care. 3	As per question 4. I am very satisfied with the quality of care my little gets at kids are fun. I am luck to have gotten her in there. The access to quality care is not so easy for parents of little babies. My score of 1 just has to do with the fact if you can not get in at kids are fun for an infant you don't have any other options for a licensed provider	8/25/2019 12:32 AM
4	there needs to be child care available	8/24/2019 2:52 AM
5	The state support programs for establishing more licensed facilities like Chilkat Child Daycare was very successful years ago, but it is my understanding that most SE programs that primarily had state supported families stopped being paid regularly when new leadership took effect which makes those programs unsustainable if they do not have enough private pay options. Our family benefited from 477 support from a tribal grant to offset childcare costs. With this program there is less willingness of family/friend providers to participate than a licensed facility because they must get a 1099 from the payments and self employment taxes are significant for this type of taxable income so we had several willing family members that didn't feel it was worth the cost or complication. It seems more collaboration between tribal state and local leaders to more fully understand needs and barriers to other potential providers becoming licensed facilities is in order as there are various resources available but none of them alone seem to meet the current needs. I applaud the HVFD for offering babysitting classes to young people. I do wonder if a 4H or other supportive program could collaborate or organize to help those kids that are qualified and available to market or meet the summer/weekend needs better as so many people work evenings and weekends in our seasonal economy. Transportation is also a potential issue with limited school bus service in town and out the road and was so valuable to us for after school care when provided by Chilkat Child Daycare.	8/23/2019 7:56 AM
6	I would think there would be space for every child in Haines, and affordable for those who could benefit. My main issue, has/had to do with availability and time slot. I was planning on homeschool possibly, but given this amazing community, my son would benefit so much from the interaction of his peers at this young time. So, child care has been crucial. So, much so I have to enter my 8 month old years ahead so I can try to get a time slot that works for all of us.	8/21/2019 3:39 AM

9	I have used essentially all the options in Haines (kids r us, family friend, CVP, child care swap with other moms, library, summer camps, etc.) it's super hard to piece it all together. Without the library most parents would be screwed after school. It's necessary to have the library and swim team (or other CYD activities) to entertain kids until 5/5:30. There is no other option. There used to be intramurals after school (teachers Ellen Larson & Terry Sharnbroich organized) but currently no after school program even available via the school. Other districts have RALLY (Juneau) to cover those hours, etc. Childcare is a major concern in Haines and a huge frustration & stress of working parents. It's not affordability, it's accessibility. Or rather it's wages not the cost of the childcare. Most options are competitive pricing wise but they are full. Or, ask a local parent who teaches- they relay on the help of other parents to pick up their child from their classroom at HBSD and drop them at head start or CVP then pick them up at 1, deliver them to the other daycare afternoon option. The juggle is ridiculous. I have vocalized this to CVP before- suggesting they operate to be more accessible to working parents and I was told it's a school not a daycare... Okay, valid but there is only one daycare in town that is always full so..... Good luck parents! (Headstart is the same) I feel fortunate I have a good job that pays well. I have no clue how a mom working at FNBA (for example) pay for childcare without assistance. When you're only making $14 an hour how the heck do you pay $35-$40 a day? That's an appropriate price for daycare but the local wages don't reflect what it costs to live in this town. No wonder they have so much turnover. After a few months I suspect moms figure out they are taking home nothing and sacrificing days, weeks, years with their kids. Why work? Thanks for asking these questions. They're important.	8/20/2019 5:07 AM
10	It's a daily issue for many of us, in summer particularly for those of us with school age children, but year round for those w younger kids. In my workplace, 3 of 5 deal with schedule and productivity issues due to lack of consistent child care/activities. In my experience, dealing with what kids will do and patching activities together falls mostly to moms, complicating women's employment and prospects. I will say that Haines actually has a lot of auxiliary activities (camps, CYD, CFS, sports, jujitsu, gymnastics) for school age kids for a town this size, and they are almost all way more affordable than in other places.	8/19/2019 11:08 AM

15	This is a HUGE issue. My peers have left Haines because of lack of childcare. I miss my job and my family misses my income but I can't work because of lack of childcare. Thanks for doing this survey.	8/16/2019 11:49 AM
16	Thank you for looking into this. Childcare has been a huge issue for us. I'm lucky because I have a flexible job so we've been able to piece things together, but the kids never knew what they were going to do the following week.	8/16/2019 3:18 AM
17	I think you need to specify between "Child Care" and "early childhood education." Both are under the same state licensing...but I feel there has been a difference for me: I have excellent access to childcare through Kim Larsen, I have had difficulty accessing early childhood education because the waiting list at CVP is full and headstart funding was in limbo (don't think it is currently). CVP operates its program in a Borough facility and limits enrollment to 14 students, but the state ratio for their license is 8-1. If the Borough is going to subsidize early childhood education then they need to make sure all children are being accomodated.	8/16/2019 3:16 AM
